

Religion and Secularism

A Kripke-Kenefick Symposium

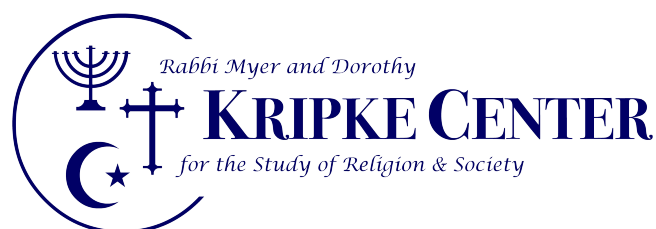

Thursday, October 5, 2017

- 9:00–9:45 David McPherson, “Three Rival Versions of the Relationship of Faith to Modernity”
- 9:45–10:30 Douglas Porpora, “Does Secularization Matter?”
- 11:00–12:00 José Casanova, “Secularism in context, regional and historical: A Catholic perspective”
- 1:00–1:45 Jennifer E. Veninga, From Danish Cartoons to Norway’s Anders Breivik: Pluralism, Secularism and Memory in Scandinavia”
- 1:45–2:30 Leonard Greenspoon, “Secular Judaism: Construction, Contraction, or Contradiction”
- 3:00–3:45 Carolyn Chau, “Secularization and Contemporary Catholic Mission: A Constructive Proposal”
- 3:45–4:30 Patrick Murray, “Secularism as a Shadow of Capital: A Historical Materialist View”

Friday, October 6, 2017

- 9:00–9:45 Paddy Gilger, S.J., “Performing Secularity”
- 9:45–10:30 Kirstin Carlson McPherson, “Hume as Secularist”
- 11:00–11:45 William O. Stephens, “Cosmology: Stoic, Christian, and Secular”
- 11:45–12:30 Daniel Rober, “Secularization, Economics, and Catholic Theological Anthropology: A Reassessment in Light of 21st-Century Conditions”
- 1:30–2:15 Philip Schwadel, “The Political Implications of Secularity in Emerging Adulthood”
- 2:15–3:00 Laura R. Olson, “Secularism among Public Schoolteachers: Implications for Attitudes about Religious Free Exercise”
- 3:30–4:15 Jeanne Schuler, “Spinoza and Hegel on Religion”
- 4:15–5:00 Richard White, “Spiritual But Not Religious”

All presentations will be given in the Harper Center 3023
The symposium is free and open to the public

Kenefick Faculty Chair
in the Humanities

Creighton
UNIVERSITY